

I cry foul. Sinclair is using a public good to promote its own private political agenda which is, surprise, to support a politician who supports companies like Sinclair getting bigger and bigger regardless of the impact on the public.

Which we're told is no impact at all, when in fact Sinclair uses its license every day for to shovel right-wing propaganda across the airwaves. There's a very clear impact on the public good (and the ability of our democracy to function) that anyone who isn't in the pocket of these media conglomerates can see as clear as day.
